BRITISH DIRIGIBLE SEEKS HELP

Washington, July 5.—Fantastic results were expected to accrue when, during the war, the federal government asked each of its hundred million citizens to constitute himself a Sherlock Holmes for the detection of the disloyal. Good service resulted as a whole but the call, to a certain extent, was like extending an invitation to a banquet to the nation's hobo horde. Those men and women from coast to coast, those people who may possess brilliant minds gone wrong, or dowered minds reaching out beyond their sphere, grasped the occasion as a long sought opportunity.

So the department of justice, which through its bureau of investigation, enforced the espionage act, and therefore became the clearing house for such information, found itself the recipient of wags of epistles from eccentric letters from lunatics, notes from the nutty. So numerous were these communications that it became necessary to establish what is dubbed its "nut" file and there today may be seen a most remarkable collection of letters from these mental cripples.

Saw Crown Prince in U. S.

Here is one, for instance, which arrived a month after the armistice was signed:

"The crown prince has landed in the United States. I saw him a few days ago. I am sure the stranger is the son of the kaiser. The physical resemblance is startling. I have been carefully supplied with an accurate description of the crown prince, and I am convinced that my identification is correct.

"He was well dressed, and wore a long tan, well-tailored, close-fitting broadcloth coat. His shoes usually worn at the races in England. The walk of this man was also identical with that of the crown prince as described in the newspapers. He walked with a slow swaying stroll, almost a strut, with a heavier bearing on the right foot.

"He was a little taller than the crown prince usually seems, but he was much like him indeed. His manner, however, was nervous as though on the alert. The peculiarity of gait showed that of an officer accustomed to leading a sword and the swing of the body to step free of it.

"The man who might have been his royal highness, might also have been only a German officer, but he came to America to parade around and give out this suspicion in order that the real whereabouts of the crown prince may remain still a safe mystery."

Put in "Nut" File.

This letter came from a woman in Mississippi. It is typical. It might have been of importance. It had to be studied as did all of its kind. Often it was on the border line of possible intelligence and had to be investigated. The fact that it belonged in the nut file had to be established.

A study of these letters was equal to a course in the psychology of the unbalanced, but it likewise required the services of the Somersville mental asylum as many as 5,000 words. Most writers offer suggestions and advice as to how the war should have been fought and how the department should cope with the pro-Germans in this country. The department would have needed a force of agents as large as the army to investigate the charges made in these letters.

"I have come to my president and my flag for protection and justice. For God's sake heed my appeal. Have always been an honest, upright, clean woman. Some persons have been offensive in the way in which they have treated me. Please have the film confiscated."

The woman was found to be of unbalanced mental condition.

Help to Win War.

All sorts of ingenious devices to help win the war were offered to the department. This one came from a man in New England.

"My sister has written to you several times so I will not have to introduce myself. I don't know much about war, but I believe I can give you a little scheme. We all know the Germans use everything they can think of to destroy our men and disable us, and if we have a trap set for them, it might do some good. My plan is this: To have a large supply of cheap guns made to shoot automatically. Load them with buck shot and then conceal them with leaves and brush. Scatter them in the line of the trench and have an electric wire connected to the trigger. When the Germans charge, the trench, the guns are fired and discharged by means of several hundred yards behind the line. This would give the Hun a dose of their own medicine."

Another man claimed that he knew about the "flu" germs. He wrote: "You will forgive me if I take the liberty to insult you. For a poor worker, you will be indulgent to me. According to the flu epidemic, the reason because the influenza now has struck only me and all the doctors in the country don't know what to do. I have the cure. The pharmacists are right in their refusal to give me the cure. I will stop the epidemic. Soon then I will no longer need to work in this prison, as I will give all my energy to study the serum of the influenza (influenza). If you do not understand my offer, it is not my fault, for I never had the distinction of over extending college."

In many instances, men and women wrote the department, offering their services. One woman wanted the department "to squeeze me into Germany as a dancer." "I dance and sing on stage and stage dancing," she wrote. "I have had offers of as much as $500 per week to do classical solos. Because of family prejudice against stage dancing, I declined all of them. I would be satisfied to go on the stage in Germany if you can get me through, and I will assuredly come out with something for you, although I cannot speak their horrible jargon."

Not all appeals bear on the war, however. One young girl asked the department to help her get on the stage.

"I might perhaps get there if I tried myself," she wrote, "but I prefer to go with the government's stamp of approval, even though it may be a little attached. I am supposed to have talent, the ability, and appearance. Please, please, please help me to get on the stage. You see I am begging you. I am not accusing you to beg me to do things for me."

Italian Disorders Increase at Florence

SOLDIERS FIRE UPON CROWDS

ONE DEAD AND 20 INJURED, IS TOLL OF DAY'S RIOTING.

LABOR CHAMBER IS IN CONTROL

Situation in Florence Becomes More Serious; Shops Are Ransacked; Streets Flooded.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Florence, Friday, July 5.—Carbines fired upon crowds here today. Disorders are increasing and the ransacking of shops is widespread. One dead and 20 injured was the toll of the rioting today. The entire street is flooded with petroleum, gasoline, wine, beer and olive oil.

Wherever the chamber of labor is able to exercise authority, goods are being transported to special warehouses under the red flag. Large quantities of supplies are being turned over to the municipality in the such a manner, the chief square of Piazza Signoria, the chief square of the city. Money taken from shops also is being placed in the care of the municipality or the chamber of labor.

The only shops respected by the rioters were those bearing the inscription: "This shop is at the disposal of the chamber of labor."

The chamber of labor apparently has become the only authority to which the people pay any attention. The automobiles and cabs permitted to use the streets must bear a sign reading "circulation allowed by chamber of labor." The local authorities seemingly have made no effort to oppose the chamber.

All the newspapers have suspended publication because of a strike of printers. The sale of newspapers from other cities is prohibited.

One of the manifestos issued by the chamber of labor announced that all goods which had been sold at prices fixed by the government would hereafter be sold at half that price. All other goods including medicine, it was ordered, should be sold at a reduction of 70 per cent from the previous prices.

HINDENBURG TAKES BLAME

THESE BELLES APPEAL

Miss Sylvia Cecil, left, and Hon. Mrs. Rowland Winn. The younger set in London society are the Miss Sylvia Cecil and Hon. Mrs. Rowland Winn. Miss Cecil is the daughter of the Hon. Mrs. Evelyn Cecil, who is Lady of Justice of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem and has large horticultural interests. Mrs. Cecil is assistant director of horticulture of the board of agriculture in England, and is the author of several books, pertaining to horticulture. Her daughter is no less popular than the mother is famous. Mrs. Rowland is one of the prettiest of the younger matrons. She is the wife of Capt. Winn of the Coldstream Guards. Capt. Winn is the heir to the second Baron St. Oswald. He served during the war and was wounded while at the front. Before her marriage Mrs. Winn was known as Evie Carew.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, former chief of the German staff, declares that he is responsible for acts of German main headquarters since August, 1914, and also the proclamations of Emperor Wilhelm concerning the waging of warfare. He asks President Ebert of Germany to inform the allies to this effect, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company.

The field marshal arrived in Hanover on Friday, the dispatch states and telegraphed the following message to President Ebert:

"The signing of the peace treaty gives me occasion for declaring that I am responsible for the decisions and acts of main headquarters since August 1914, and also that proclamations and orders of his majesty, the emperor and king concerning the waging of warfare were issued upon my advice and upon my responsibility. I cannot therefore come to inform the German people and the allied governments of this declaration."

Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, former German chancellor, who held office at the beginning of the war also has made a similar statement accepting responsibility for the war.

BRITISH WOMEN'S EMANCIPATION BILL STILL BEFORE HOUSE

London, Friday, July 4.—The woman's emancipation bill is still before the house of commons, notwithstanding an effort by the government today to have it set aside to make way for a new measure on the subject. Major Walcott Astor's motion to reject it was defeated by a vote of 100 to 85. The bill, backed by the labor party, has been before the commons for several months.

Before the motion to reject was offered, Major Astor announced the government planned to introduce a substitute next week. This alternative measure, he said, would place women on an equality with men in civil and judicial matters and would be wide and comprehensive.

Confidence in the government, it was understood, probably would not be considered as having been at stake in the vote on the motion.

The emancipation bill now before the house of commons was designed to give women political and legal equality with men. It included a provision permitting women to sit in the house of lords.

A London dispatch received Friday was so garbled in transmission as to make it appear that the bill itself had been defeated.

CHAMBER RECEIVES U. S. HOUSING PLANS

Nine complete sets of plans for four five and six room houses believed by the United States Housing corporation to be the most adaptable for use in growing cities have just been received at the Chamber of Commerce, are now on display, and are attracting much attention. The plans were sent from the national housing body.

Prospective home builders who desire to inspect the plans or use copies of them are invited to do so by the Chamber of Commerce. The plans have been used extensively in other cities and have been found most satisfactory in all respects.

GERMANY DESIRES TO BEGIN CARRYING OUT PEACE TERMS

Paris, July 5.—Germany has indicated her desire to begin immediately her compliance with the terms of the peace treaty regarding reparations. Her request for oral conferences of German economic experts with allied experts has been granted.

The conferences will be begun early next week, according to present indications.

A permanent commission has not yet been appointed by the allies. Until it is constituted the commission which had been created to name various conference commissions will act in the German negotiations. The American member of this commission is John Foster, who has been in Germany since the armistice. His negotiations will be personal, marks the new status of the relations between Germany and the allies.

Import Restrictions Not Yet in Force

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

London, July 5.—In its review of commercial and economic conditions in Great Britain during June the American chamber of commerce in London says that with the disbandment of the imports consultative council little change may be expected in import restrictions on American goods before September.

RESIGNS POSITION

Harry M. Zigler, manager of the A. and F. Red Front store on Adams Street, has resigned his position. Mr. Zigler said he would devote his entire time to conducting his tailor establishment at 205 West Milwaukee street.

FLASHES

New York, July 5.—A wireless message received here today from the transport George Washington, bearing President Wilson, said the vessel would reach Annapolis Channel light ship at noon Tuesday and dock at Hoboken about 3 p. m.

Paris, July 5.—General Dragonoff, on a special mission from Admiral Kolchak, head of the Onskai-Russan government, arrived here today.

New York, July 5.—Joseph P. Tully, secretary to President Wilson, announced here today that according to the present program, Mr. Wilson will address the senate on Thursday.

LEGUIA OVERTHROWS PARDO AS PRESIDENT OF PERU AFTER SHORT AND BLOODLESS REVOLUTION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Lima, Peru, Friday, July 4.—Augusto B. Leguia late today assumed office as provisional president of Peru and took up his residence in the government palace as a result of the successful overthrow earlier in the day of President Pardo.

Senor Pardo, his ministers and a number of high officials of the army and navy are in prison. Pardo being detained in the penitentiary here. Virtually no fighting and no casualties marked the overthrow of the Pardo government. Senor Leguia is supported by virtually all of the army and naval forces in Lima and public opinion here apparently is behind him.

The revolution began at 3 o'clock this morning with an attack on the palace by two regiments of troops and a force of police. By 5 o'clock President Pardo had been deposed and Senor Leguia proclaimed provisional president. The movement was similar to that which resulted in the overthrow of President Guillermo Billinghurst on February 4, 1914.

Charges Violations

It was announced late today that President Pardo would be placed on trial on charges of having violated the constitution and of having conspired against the institutions of the republic. It is alleged that the government's refusal to obey the order of the supreme court in the habeas corpus proceedings in connection with the newspaper, El Tiempo, was a violation of the constitution. Another charge against Senor Pardo is that he attempted to purchase the votes of congress in order to carry out his plans as president. Senor Leguia is supported by virtually all of the army and naval forces in Lima and public opinion here apparently is behind him.

The inauguration of Senor Leguia as president, it is said, probably will take place within two months. The provisional president claims that he received 160,000 votes of the 200,000 cast in the recent presidential election.

Fourth Proclaimed Holiday

The fourth of July had been proclaimed as a national holiday by President Pardo. Thousands of persons thronged the streets today cheering for Senor Leguia. A crowd assembled before the government palace and called on Leguia for a speech.

The provisional president, speaking from the balcony of the palace, declared that he intended to organize a strong government on a popular basis and to increase the army and navy to the status they had held during his previous term as president from 1903 to 1912. He said he would defend the principles of justice and right which had triumphed in the great war and would associate Peru without reserve with the cause of the allies. He intended, he said, to extend every facility for the introduction of foreign capital to aid in the development of national resources.

Leguia Hears of Plot

Last night Senor Leguia declared he feared of a plot to arrest him and send him into exile, and as a last resort, he gave orders to the army chiefs favorable to him to go ahead with their plan to overthrow the government. Senor Pardo was expected to be dealt with justly.

There are no reports from the provinces concerning the situation there, but Senor Leguia and his associates expect no difficulties in that quarter.

The provisional president expects to announce his cabinet shortly.

RAILROAD STRIKE IS GENERAL IN PORTUGAL

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Washington, July 5.—Advices from Lisbon to the state department today reported that the general railroad strike called last Tuesday had affected the greater portion of train service in Portugal except on the lines to the south and southeast of the cape. Some sabotage has been reported and troops are protecting a number of railroad stations.

The minister of labor told a meeting of strikers and railroad representatives that the men need expect no assistance from the government as long as they continued sabotage.

COMMISSION WILL MEET.

The regular monthly meeting of the fire and police commission will be held in the mayor's office at the city hall, Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

IRISH UNIONISTS FIRM FOR REPUBLIC

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

London, July 5.—The Irish unionist alliance, replying to a manifesto issued recently by the "Irish dominion league," asserts that the first act of any freely elected parliament in full control of Irish economic and military resources, would be to proclaim an Irish republic.

"The alliance trusts and believes that those concerned for the peace, the progress of Ireland," the reply says, "will resolutely decline to support a policy which, if successful, would constitute an imperial danger of the first magnitude."

A manifesto issued on June 27 by the "Irish dominion league," proposed the establishment of self-government in Ireland, but with Ireland remaining within the British empire.

MOONEY STRIKERS' NUMBERS DOUBTFUL

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

San Francisco, July 5.—Most labor unions in San Francisco prolonged their July 4th holiday to last over July 5, so it was not possible for employers or labor leaders to estimate today the number who have joined a general strike on behalf of Thomas J. Mooney, sentenced to life imprisonment for murder.

Fourteen labor unions of San Francisco voted to join the strike, S. Schulberg, executive officer for the International Defense league said. Schulberg asserted one million workers in the United States and Canada would join the strike.

General offices of the defense league were closed. Schulberg said the office employees had joined the strike.

Washington, July 5.—This message was sent to the R-34 by radio from the Otter Cliff station at 2:10 p. m.

"U. S. S. Sallia left Cross Island, Maine, at 12:50 p. m. to assist you. Two destroyers leaving Boston will communicate with you.

"Bureau of operations."

Washington, July 5.—Two American destroyers were ordered today to proceed toward the Bay of Fundy to lend any required assistance to the British dirigible R-34 which reported that she was fighting a head wind supply getting low.

Boston, July 5.—The navy converted yacht Sallia, sailed this afternoon from Machias Bay, Maine, to the assistance of the R-34. It is thought that she will come up with the dirigible about 5 o'clock.

The destroyers Kalk and Ballard are being made ready at the Boston navy yard and will proceed to the Bay of Fundy if they can get under way in time to be of assistance.

The submarine chaser 407 left Bay Harbor, Maine, this afternoon to aid the R-34. Doubt that actual assistance would be necessary was raised in a second message announced by the naval communications office here. This was a repetition of the earlier message asking whether a destroyer could proceed to the Bay of Fundy, but with the words "if required" inserted.

The destroyers Bancroft and Stevens at the Boston navy yard were getting up steam this afternoon under orders to proceed to the assistance of the dirigible at top speed. It was expected that they would sail about 4 o'clock.

Orders to send the destroyers Kalk and Ballard had been received, but they could not be made ready quickly and orders to send the other ships forward.

YANKS CELEBRATE FOURTH OF JULY ON BANKS OF RHINE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Coblentz, Friday, July 4.—A salute of 48 guns, fired on each state in the union—flashed out over Coblentz today from the ancient walls of the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, echoing up and down the Rhine as the first part of the army's program in celebrating the Fourth in Germany.

This was the first time that American artillery has barked from the famous fortress on the east bank of the Rhine. The salute was fired from 75's of the Seventeenth Field Artillery and the roar of the same guns was heard before by Germans at St. Mihiel, in the Champagne and in the battle of the Argonne.

The Fourth was celebrated throughout the American occupied area, all duty being suspended except what was absolutely necessary. The afternoon was filled with athletic activities such as boxing, track meets and ball games and the evening was devoted to theatrical performances and pyrotechnic displays at the headquarters of various units.

Cuban's Day Celebrated.
Santiago, Chile, July 4.—The American colony held a banquet today to Cuba Independence day. The charge d'affaires of the United States embassy was the principal speaker. After the banquet a ball was held and the entire diplomatic corps was present.

The Chilean newspapers today praise the United States, recognizing the importance of American co-operation in the allies. Eulogies of President Wilson are also printed.
In honor of the signing of peace the government ordered the schools closed for the day.

Belgium Observes Day.
Brussels, Friday, July 4.—American Independence Day was celebrated in many places in Belgium, especially at Brussels and Antwerp. A luncheon was given at the American legation, Buromaster Max proposing a toast to American and Belgian White, the latter responded in a feeling manner.

Also Rio Janeiro.
Rio Janeiro, Friday, July 4.—The Commercial association held a session today in honor of the anniversary of American independence. An agreement with the American chamber of commerce to submit all commercial differences between the two countries to arbitration, was signed at the meeting.

JUST FOLKS By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE PLUGGER.

He isn't very brilliant and his pace is often slow.
There's nothing very flashy in his style.
He has to dig and labor for the things he wants to know.
And he's busy learning something all the while.
The clever men go by him in a hurry.
And the stars get all the mention, and the fame.
But the patient, steady plugger in a thorough sort of way.
Keeps on going and he gets there, just the same.
He's a quiet sort of fellow and he's backward in his speech.
You'll never find him clamoring for applause.
He will listen to another who has anything to teach.
And he never ceases working for the task he has to do.
He may take a little longer with the task he has to do.
Than the genius whose talents seem to run.
But you'll find the patient plugger at the finish coming through.
And there's merit in his labor when it's done.
He's slow in getting started, he must know the reasons why.
Certain things occur within a certain way.
There is nothing in his method to attract the passer-by.
And at times you'd think he's wasted many a day.
But when brilliant men have faded, and the stars have lost their light.
When the clever men have stumbled in despair.
When the great have come to failure with the goal they sought in sight.
You'll find the patient plugger getting there.

Sun Nearest Earth.
The sun is nearest the earth—or perihelion—at the beginning of the year, or when the northern hemisphere has winter. It is at its greatest distance, or aphelion, about the middle of the year, or during the summer of the northern hemisphere. The least distance of the sun from the earth is more than 81,000,000 miles, and the greatest more than 94,000,000. The mean distance is commonly stated as 92,900,000.

LOONEY LETTERS ARE PLACED IN NUT FILE BY WAR OFFICIALS

I am accustomed to being "bugged." It was suggested by another woman that the agents of the department might be able to get valuable information about German spies in this country through occult societies. She explained that the Germans received most of their information about the enemy from the spirits.

Suspicious of Gypsies.
A man in New York state was so much concerned about the lunacy possessed by a band of gypsies that he wrote the department "that it is not very often that gypsies are well behaved and when in war times they travel through the country in bands some motor cars it might be to the official interest of the government to know about it, and see if German money was used to buy cars for them."

"Preceding the European war, and once after it started," writes a man from one of the southern states, "I received three anonymous communications by mail, threatening me that if I did not stop aiding Great Britain against Germany, suitable revenge would be taken. Two of the letters suggested kidnapping me as an easy means of disposing of me. I should be carried to a certain point on the Atlantic coast and shipped out to sea, where I would be placed on a German warship and taken to Germany."

Such are samples of endless numbers of letters that constantly pour into the department of justice, and are examined and filed away in the special crypt prepared for them.

Emporia, Kan.—The first meeting that Phil Edwards, private in the A. E. F., and his brother, Hugh, captain in the A. E. F., had since the war began two years ago, was in a dance hall in Paris a few months ago, according to the story told by them on their return. Private Phil was dancing when it was announced there would be a contest for the best looking man on the floor. Phil looked up and saw what his brother, Captain Hugh, had been nominated. Hugh won, although Phil declined to say if he voted for Hugh.

Reversing the Compliment.
A cashier of somewhat portly build was frowning over a statement of accounts just placed before him by his pretty typist. "As a young lady," he said, "I admire your type, but I can't honestly say I admire your typing." "How funny!" she replied smartly. "We are so different for, though you are of course splendid at figures, no one could say you have a splendid figure."

Thumb-Bells.
Sailors used to wear a little contrivance on their thumbs; they called them first thumb-bells, then later thumb-rings. It is claimed that they were used in the days of Hercules. It takes 20 men and a great deal of expensive machinery to make a thumb-bell. They were introduced into Great Britain from Holland in 1695 by one John Soffing, who thus brought into a new and important industry into England.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.
(By Mrs. Louise Ford.)

"What is this we are killing?
For we license the selling of that
Which all through the ages has slain
The bodies and souls of children.
But, Oh! little sisters of mine, so we,
In my country at peace with the world
With our flag of freedom unfurled
We can and we will set you free."

A student in Oberlin, Ohio, after four years of hard study for the ministry found that his health was failing, so took Horace Greeley's advice to go west. There was no railroad. Putting his household goods and family into three white covered wagons, of which he drove one, his twelve-year-old son another, and Saint Courageous—as the children later named the mother—took charge of the third one, also the two little girls and they started on a five-hundred-mile drive to make a new home. It took three weeks of traveling to reach Janesville. The family remained in this little hamlet until a small house was built on the edge of the prairie and woods, three miles south, near to the beautiful Rock river. They moved into it before there were any windows and not much of a roof, but it being charming June weather they did not mind, the cook stove out of doors, for were they not making the foundation for Forest Home.

Little by little other buildings were added, trees planted, vines and flowers added their beauty and other improvements were made until this home planted in the wilderness became known as the prize farm of Rock county.

A lover of nature, he became a close student of its wonders and the children followed his teachings. The county fair was one of his pets. He also was president of the state Agricultural and Horticultural society; a member of the legislature and interested in all that pertained to the upbuilding of Janesville and the country surrounding.

For twelve years this family lived and loved every nook and corner of this home that had grown in beauty and comfort by the work of willing hands.

Strange that one of these little girls in this prairie home, who in after years should be set apart as "God's best gift to American women of the nineteenth century, for she has done more to enlarge our sympathies, widen our outlook and develop our gifts, than any other man or woman of her time." This is the world's tribute to our little girl, who gathered her best inspirations from the prairie, river and trees that we love, making a firm foundation for her glorious womanhood. She always turned to those early years of childhood as her "best beloved". This father had his own point of view about woman's place in the world—it was in the home and man as supreme master of that home and of all it contained.

All political papers were declared unlawful for woman to read. Strange to say when Frank read them they proved the most attractive of all. He also disliked publicity for woman, especially for his girls and objected to Frances writing for the public, even teaching and public speaking could not be tolerated.

Why are our most cherished ideals shattered by our children when we try to make them walk in our narrow path? It surely was not environment or teaching that made Frances the leader of a great cause. She was like one apart led by the divine will—for she was unlike any other girl that I ever knew before or since.

The first time I saw the Willard girls they were coming to the little old school house. Frank was driving the oxen, hitched to a sledge, while the hired man was made to yield the whip to her and he be the passenger. That same spirit of leader went all through life, not that she was domineering but unconsciously she was chosen. She never cared for domestic duties or pleasures inside of the house but out-of-door sports were her life. She loved her father's tools and enjoyed making bows and arrows, cross guns, with which she supplied all of her playmates and she as captain fought and routed imaginary Indians and wild animals. Then when we were all tired she dearly loved to make a speech. We as audience, were commanded to enquire. At that time it was her great ambition to be a preacher, much to the horror of her father who tried his best to stamp out all such thoughts.

One time she brought to school a wooden stencil with our initials cut and we were told to leave our impress on every one of our books and all our belongings. When we looked at hers we gave her the laugh for it spelled F. E. W., telling her she never could amount to very much.

"You just wait and see. I will make it mean many."
A sad day when all these delightful days were at an end. The time had come when the girls were to go away to school. During the summer of 1858 they came home for vacation and Frances taught her first school for six weeks in the loved school house. It was a delightful time for she was a charming teacher.

She wished for a watch of her own earning and made this teaching a start, her father greatly objecting for he said: "I can provide all I think necessary for my women without their earning public money."

The next spring Forest Home was sold, which was a great mistake, the family moving to Evanston. When illness came to anyone of this family their one desire was to go back to the loved home.

During Mary's last illness she almost daily begged to be taken there, saying "I should get well if I could breathe the air of the dearest place on earth."

Years passed ere Frances came to see the home town again. Years passed in strenuous work for the good of the great cause that she had made her life work. She visited and spoke in more than a thousand towns, winning the world by flattery it, and all of her followers are proud of her success. Finally she found time to rest for a moment and gladly she turned to the old home. Madam Willard, Anna Gordon and Miss Willard were the guests of Miss Little at the the Institute of the Blind where years ago we used to attend Sunday afternoon service when there was only a small stone building and Mr. Churchman was the superintendent.

Miss Willard wished to have a picnic on the bank of the river back of the old home and there all that was left of the old time friends met for an afternoon. It was a joyous greeting even if sad memories of the departed loved ones did obtrude.

In the morning I had seen Miss Willard the dignified, scholarly woman, meet and converse with her many callers in a manner that rather averted but here at this assembling of old friends she met them on their own grounds, even Irish Bridget who had been the maid of all work at the Willard home, was made to feel that Frank, as she called her, had not changed, but talked brogue just as she used to when she was coaxing Bridget for some dainty. That was a winning card, she met people on their level and never made one feel inferior.

We had lunch sitting on the ground with large, luscious strawberries dipped in sugar, brought by George Kellogg from his nursery. We sang, told stories of Auld Lang Syne, toasted everything and everybody, then leaving Saint Courageous and Mrs. Bains to entertain each other, we wandered over the hills and rediscovered the many old points. Frances was just a girl again and remembered the name the children had given every hillock and tree. "Wahle's back", "crow's nest", etc., there the spring must be found where the water supplied the home ere a well was dug, and many times the children had brought it to the home. It was choked with leaves and sand but Frances would dig it out and soon the water was running cold and clear as of yore. We all had to have a drink as the water was the best ever. Mrs. Willard thought so too. So much for memories.

It was at this picnic that Miss Willard conceived the idea of buying the old home, reconstructing it as it was in its palmy days, placing the old school house nearby and giving the whole to the W. C. T. U. as a resort for tired workers. Mr. Baines consented to sell the home and ten acres of land for $1500. At this time the society was straining every nerve to build the Temple in Chicago and it was thought best to wait. Afterwards Miss Willard regretted that she did not lecture and raise a fund for this. Failing health soon sent her to England as a guest of Lady Henry Somerset, where she stayed a year. They must have had heart to heart talks for soon a letter was received from Lady Henry containing a request that the place might be bought and she would pay for it, giving it to Miss Willard. On inquiry it was found that Mr. Baines had sold to a man in Rockford, further he was found to be financially involved with a prospect that he would lose the old home farm and so it proved. It took such a long time to get everything straightened that it was too late for Miss Willard to realize her dream.

Few men or women have been so devoted to an unselfish ideal as was Miss Willard's and now that there is light of the realization of this ideal, I believe she rejoices with all other women in the accomplishment of the seemingly impossible.

"All things come to those who wait."

ASK US

The Gazette maintains an information bureau at Washington, D. C., under the direction of Frederic J. Haskin. Questions will be answered free of charge. Those desiring information write a letter to the Janesville Daily Gazette, Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., and enclose a stamp. The letter will be answered.

Q. Can you tell me where I can get a good map of Europe as defined by the peace treaty? P. O. L.

A. The Washington Information Bureau of this paper will send you such a map if you will make your request of them direct, enclosing a two-cent stamp for return postage.

Q. What was Napoleon's famous palindromic? J. B. H.

A. Napoleon is credited with the following palindromic: "Able was I ere I saw Elba."

Q. Who are the Creations of North Carolina? P. B.

A. They are a mixed Indian and white people found in Robeson county, N. C., having Indian names and English habits. They are descended from the "lost colony" of 1591.

Q. What is the cause of the bluish stems found on the watermelons in market this year? E. M.

A. The department of agriculture says they have been treated to protect them from rot. The treatment consists in painting the freshly cut stem of each melon with paste made of bluestone mixed with starch. This does not lessen the quality.

Q. What are Alaska's most important exports?

A. The exports consist mostly of gold, canned salmon and other fish, copper ore and furs.

Q. What was the origin of the phrase "Lafayette, we come?"

A. General Pershing coined this phrase in a speech at the town of Lafayette shortly after the arrival of the American expeditionary force in France.

Q. What is President Wilson expected to do after his term of office has expired? V. A. N.

A. It has been intimated that he will devote himself to writing a history of the great war. It is argued in that connection as a use of his acknowledged literary ability, he is in a more advantageous position to write a history of a great war than has been any historian of the past.

Q. Do the colored glass globes in drug store windows have any particular significance? W. A. D.

A. Yes; they indicate that the man who operates the store is a licensed pharmacist.

Q. What is the origin of grapefruit? Where did it get its name? C. V. B.

A. Grapefruit is native to the West Indies. It was early introduced into

ASK US

Florida and its qualities improved by breeding. It is believed to have been given the name because of the fact that the fruit grows in clusters and in that respect resembles grapes.

Q. When and where was the first locomotive used? P. G. H.

A. Locomotives were first used on a road built by the Delaware and Hudson Canal company between Carbondale and Honesdale in Pennsylvania in 1829.

A TEMPLE OF THE CHAM. Out in the hill country of Indo-China, at Nhatrang, stands a temple that testifies to the ancient civilization of a vanishing race. In the past few centuries, the Cham, who built this temple, have been driven about and almost exterminated by the attacks of more aggressive, if less cultured, tribes.

The wise Cham priests and chieftains are gone and forgotten. The few survivors of their race are merged with other peoples or scattered to the four corners of Indo-China. All that remains are a few battered temples guarded by temple attendants of other tribes who are willing to rename the gods of the Cham and appropriate them to preside over their own creeds.

Such a temple is the one at Nhatrang, said to be over a thousand years old, and now held by the Annamese. The Annamese natives who are so completely in possession of this old stronghold of Brahmin faith even tell stories explaining the true coming of the goddess and the origin of the temple.

One of these legends says that the goddess was married to a king but that she left him and came to Nhatrang and commanded a temple built here for her. The king sent a messenger after her with orders to cut off her head if she would not return to him. But the goddess anticipated him by removing her head herself on the return voyage the ship was sunk. Thus was the goddess avenged and her power demonstrated.

The goddess of the story and of the temple is a ten-armed Hindu deity

Outside of the temple, which is really a collection of miniature temples, there are busts of maidens apparently placed as decorations. The real attraction of the place, leaving out the goddess, lies in the picturesque location of the old Hindu temple, set high on its hill overlooking the river, the native villages, and the tropical forest.

Finds Gem, Substitutes Glass, Gets $5 Reward

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]
St. Louis, Mo.—The loss of her diamond ring was discovered by Mrs. Theodore Glucker while she was in an uptown building. A man aided in the search. He pretended to pick up a diamond. "Here it is," he said, a diamond. Mrs. Glucker thanked him and gave him $5. A jeweler said the diamond was glass. The lost stone has not been found.

RAILROAD REFERENDUM BALLOTS MAILED TO ALL C. OF C. MEMBERS

Balots to be used in the referendum vote on railroad legislation were mailed out today to the 750 members of the Chamber of Commerce by Alexander Jacobsen, secretary of the committee. The committee is in charge of the office during the absence of Manager Frank J. Green who is conducting a hotel building investigation in eastern cities.

Ten separate questions pertaining to government and private ownership and control of the railroads are listed on each ballot, members to record themselves either in favor or opposed to the legislation. The questions are:

1. The committee recommends the adherence to the policy of corporate ownership and operation, with comprehensive regulation.

2. The committee recommends return of roads to corporate operation as soon as remedial legislation can be enacted.

3. The committee recommends adherence to the period of federal control as now fixed unless and until impossibility of remedial legislation in this period clearly appears.

4. The committee recommends permission for consolidation in the public interest, with prior approval by government authority, in a limited number of strong competing systems.

5. The committee recommends a requirement that railroad companies engaging in interstate commerce be federal corporations, with rights of taxation, police regulation reserved for states.

6. The committee recommends exclusive federal regulation of capital expenditures and security issues affecting interstate commerce.

7. The committee recommends federal regulation of interstate rates affecting interstate commerce.

8. The committee recommends a statutory rate providing that rates in each traffic section shall yield an equate return on fair value of the property as determined by public authority.

9. The committee recommends payment into a fund of a share of the excess earnings of any railroad system under application of the above statutory rule over an equitable minimum return upon fair value of property, this fund to be used as Congress directs in strengthening general railroad credit and increasing general railroad efficiency.

10. The committee recommends a federal transportation board to promote development of a national system of rail, water, and highway transportation facilities.

The result of the vote in Janesville will be sent to the national Chamber of Commerce to be used together with the vote in other cities in prevailing upon congress to adopt popular railroad legislation.

PLUMBERS' EXAMS TO BE HELD JULY 15

Examinations for licenses for master and journeyman plumbers will be held in this city, Tuesday, July 15 at the city hall. The examinations will be conducted by the state committee of plumbing examiners consisting of Norman Helne and Frank J. Smith, Milwaukee, and W. E. Kiefer, Janesville. Already there are 48 applications on file and more are expected. These examinations must be taken by all who propose to follow the plumbing trade as master or journeyman. The work is under the state board of health.

Examinations will also be given at Milwaukee and Eau Claire.

Commission Approves $2 Charge for Holding Grain and Seed Cars

Washington, July 5.—The interstate commerce commission today approved a charge of $2 per car for holding grain and seed cars out for inspection when disposition orders are not furnished before six p. m. of the day inspection is made.

As neither state nor federal laws require inspection of hay or straw the commission approved a flat charge of $2 per car without limitation of time when hay or straw is held for inspection.

Service performed in setting out such cars may not be the basis of an extra charge and no charge is permissible when cars are inspected on terminal elevators or trucks held in yards for the convenience of the carrier.

ELKS' DRIVE TO OPEN MONDAY MORNING

Fred Howe, chairman of the committee in charge of the drive to raise $11,000 in Janesville for the Salvation Army, issued a call today for all members of the Elks to report at the clubrooms Monday morning at 8 o'clock to assist in the campaign.

Arrangements have been completed for the drive and according to Mr. Howe every effort will be extended to show the top in a short time. Mr. Howe said the drive had already opened in Beloit, and according to reports received, Beloit would have an easy time making its quota.

"It must be understood that the campaign is not only for members of the Elks, but for every citizen. All will be asked to contribute," Mr. Howe said.

Organizations in surrounding cities and villages have been completed and everything is in readiness for the start Monday morning.

SOFT DRINK MEN GETTING BIG TRADE

The new rush of business in Janesville soft drink parlors following on the heels of the dry wave, is already being felt and additional help is being engaged by the owners of ice cream parlors and soft drink emporiums. Former liquor profits are now rolling into soft drinks and some assert that business has increased nearly 50 percent.

Several of the local ice cream men are planning on enlarging their establishments. One of the owners said today that he proposed to enlarge his place to accommodate at least four times as many people as he has been accustomed to serving.

A few of the saloons have reopened, selling soft drinks. Light wines are not being sold in any of the places and only near-beer can be purchased. Other saloon-keepers are planning on modeling their places, but are reluctant to start until President Wilson takes some action.

Needed Much Energy. After returning from a strenuous play with her rather domineering little friend, Berta complained about Bobby's manner, which other children had described as being quite "bossy."

"Oh, mother," she ended with a long-suffering sigh, "it certainly does take a lot of energy to play with Bobby!"

Further Elucidation Needed. Dr. Hugo Ribbert of Bonn, Germany, in a book "Death From Old Age," tells that the way to stay young is to keep going. In other words, if you run around fast enough Old Nick will not be able to catch you. This is good advice, so far as it goes, but it is not all the answer.

SECOND BIG UNIT OF SAMSON PLANT NEARS COMPLETION

Structural steel work on the new Samson unit has advanced during the past two weeks at such a pace that it is believed the steel frame to the big unit will be completed by the end of this month. This building will form a second unit for the assembly of tractors and for experimental work.

Together with the raising of the steel frames is the laying of the main floor. Side tracks have been built for the carrying of ground material in preparation for brickwork.

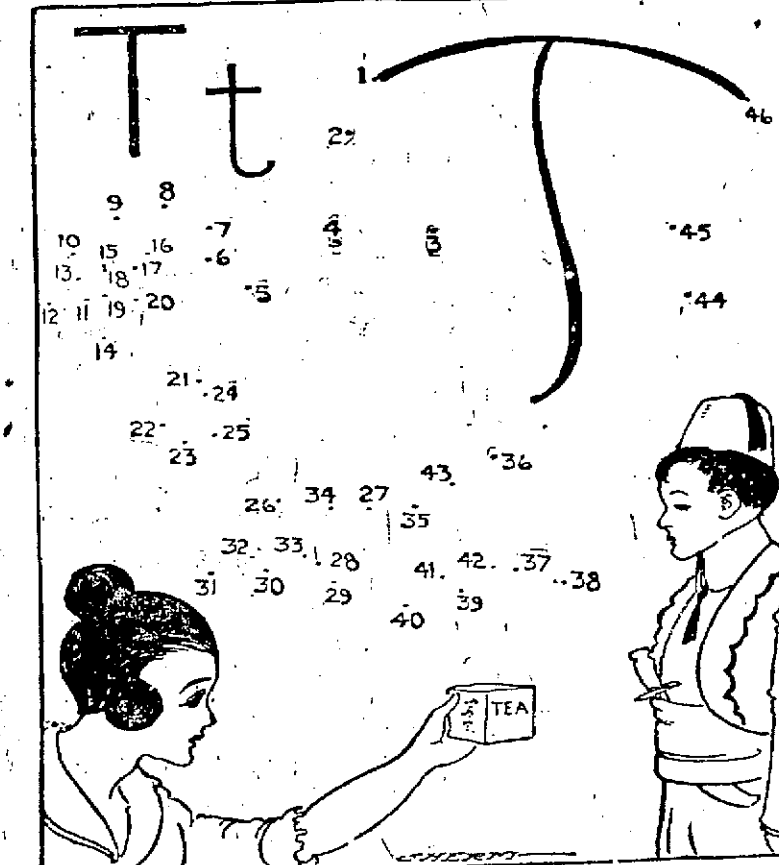

Two of the largest power booms in the state are being employed for raising the steel skeleton, which is riveted and bolted into position by structural workers of extreme skill and daring. The work is an excellent example of modern methods of standardized building. It is hoped to start production and assembly work in the new unit this fall.

DRUG STORES TO BE CLOSED SUNDAY NIGHTS

Effective tomorrow and continuing until October 1, every drug store in the city will be closed after 12 o'clock Sunday afternoon as the result of a canvass completed today by Alexander Jacobsen, secretary of the commercial division of the Chamber of Commerce. They will be opened at 8 o'clock Sunday morning.

It has been the practice during the past year to keep drug stores open Sunday evenings from 6 until 8 o'clock in addition to their regular hours. The new ruling will give druggists and their employees a half holiday every week, a privilege they have not enjoyed for several years.

THE DOT DRAWING CLASS

"When I told you yesterday," said the Dot Drawing teacher, "that I expected you to draw around the letter 'T' today, I didn't expect such a hearty response. William came all dressed up in his manly costume to suggest a Turk and Charlotte brought me a box of tea. That shows that your minds are working. But what I had in mind was something entirely different. In fact, it is something good to eat, something which I think you are all very fond of. Let's let Anna draw the dots and see if it's not a."

FORMER ALDERMAN DIES AT HOSPITAL

William Hall, a resident of this city since 1835, died at Mercy hospital today after a lingering illness.

He was born at Owens Sound, Canada, in 1852, and at an early age moved with his parents to Indianapolis where he attended the public schools.

He learned the hardware business and conducted the hardware store in Indianapolis for a number of years. In 1881 he married Mrs. Ellen Arnold. They moved to Janesville in 1885. For several years Mr. Hall was alderman of the third ward. He is survived by two stepchildren, William E. Arnold, and Mrs. J. P. Thorne of this city.

Funeral services will be conducted from the residence, 331 South Main street, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

GIANT HANDLEY-PAGE FORCED TO DESCEND IN PARRSBORO STREETS

Halifax, N. S., July 5.—The giant Handley-Page bi-plane Atlantic, under the command of Vice Admiral Kerr, which left Harbor Grace, N. F., yesterday enroute to New York or Atlantic City, landed in the streets of Parrsboro at 5:30 o'clock this morning. The big airplane was forced to descend owing to engine trouble, and in landing was damaged beyond immediate repair. No member of the crew was injured. Parrsboro is a town about 35 miles west of here. The "Atlantic" left Harbor Grace at 4:25 p. m. yesterday on her 1,200 mile trip. It is presumed that the big bi-plane was diverted from the intended course across the Bay of Fundy as a result of fog. Her schedule called for passing over Halifax at midnight last night.

Everything went well with the bi-plane until an oil tube burst shortly after three o'clock this morning, necessitating a descent. A large open field was decided upon for the landing, but on coming down a wire was encountered and the under carriage of the machine was badly wrecked.

Your Own Independence

Perhaps you think of the savings account simply as a protection against the wants of old age.

The big importance of a handsome savings account is the power it gives you to do as you want to when real opportunities come to you.

No man is really independent who has no money laid up which he can fall back on when he wants it.

How about your own savings?

You'll find this a good place to build up a nice bank account by the very good plan of small savings deposits every week.

EDGERTON DEFEATS STOUGHTON NINE

Edgerton, July 5.—The Highway Trailers celebrated the Fourth of July by defeating the Washington City nine in a morning game at Stoughton by the score of 16 to 5. The game was a long drawn out affair due to heavy hitting by the locals. Gullickson, on the mound for Stoughton, retired after the second inning when the Trailers had registered nine markers in the two innings. W. Olson replaced him on the mound and fared but little better. The Trailers are scheduled to play Footville tomorrow afternoon. This is the third time these teams have crossed bats this season. Footville being obliged to take the short end of both contests.

The Nine Great Heart Emotions Every Women Has

Loyalty Pride Hate Yearning Joy Fear
Anxiety Desire Grief

These are the emotions that follow one another with lightning speed in the heart and mind of Marie Alexander.

Roger meets her first at midnight—a moonlight phantom of the beach—beautiful and bewitching in her elaborate bathing costume; but she runs away.

Again—he dances with her at the grand ball, and her gown is stunning; but she disappears.

Then—he finds her in his sister's room—a hotel maid, drab and dismal in the plain livery of a servant.

Who is she? Where did she get her wonderful midnight wardrobe?

"She stole it from me," shrieked a girl guest of the hotel.

And Marie disappears again, and so do three mysterious strangers who have been stopping at the Sea View.

It is many weeks before Roger, desperate in his search for her, gets even the slightest clue. It is a big, official looking envelope. He tears it open, eagerly, greedily, and there, before his eyes, but see—

In each major league this year the pennant race is closer than it has been in many years, and there is every indication that the close competition will hold right up to the end of the season. With the renewal interest in the game, which is shown by the record attendance on both circuits this season, the world's series this year is sure to result in the greatest attraction in the history of baseball.

The remarkable growth of the world's series can easily be seen by a comparison of the figures of the first season, which was the first of the National and American leagues in 1903 and the series of the present day. The total attendance of the Boston-Pittsburgh series in 1903 was 100,429 for eight games, which was an average of only 12,553 a game. In the last big series played, that between the Giants and Chicago White Sox in 1917, the total attendance for six games was 186,654, or an average of 31,109 a game.

At least three or four clubs in each league are pretty sure to figure in the pennant race this year, and notable contests are looked for on both circuits. In the American league the Yankees, Chicago White Sox, Cleveland Indians and Boston or Detroit are sure to figure in the race right up to the finish, and in the older league the Giants, Cincinnati, Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh, and perhaps St. Louis, give promise of engaging in a spirited battle right up to the close of the season.

The surprise among followers of the courts is the amazing comeback of Mrs. George W. Wightman in regaining the national championship of the Boston-Pittsburgh series in 1903 was 100,429 for eight games, which was an average of only 12,553 a game. In the last big series played, that between the Giants and Chicago White Sox in 1917, the total attendance for six games was 186,654, or an average of 31,109 a game.

A CHANCE TO LIVE

BY ZOE BECKLEY

THE BETROTHAL FEAST. Annie sensed only the "let's celebrate." Bernie was taking their engagement for granted, then. Oh, how glad she was about everything—how thankful. How wonderful the world was! How good it was to succeed and to be loved and to have a good time! With Bernie holding her elbow and walking close to her through the dusky park they seemed nothing lacking in her world. They passed a group of girls. One of them sang out: "Hello, Annie! Can't you recognize any?"

Annie jumped out of her trance and "recognized" her old friend of the factory, the "firebrand" girl. Annie smiled and waved.

"Who's that?" asked Bernie perfunctorily.

"Oh, a girl I used to work with in the factory," said Annie absently.

"Factory. I never knew you worked in a factory,"

"Umph-hum," answered Annie briefly.

Bernie hugged her arm closer and smiled down into her face.

"Why, you ain't one bit like a factory girl," he said. "I guess you didn't know you were stay there long. Any girl that wants to can work her way out of such a life."

Bernie's favorite themes. All Annie had to do to make up your mind, and push yourself. There ain't a hard man in the chemical business, or one of the fellows that cleaned up big, but what picked up his end, and where he could, and got along by hard plugging. I guess that was one of those discontented troublemakers. She looked it.

Annie vaguely felt there was something wrong in Bernie's argument, but she was too happy to decide what it was or try to combat it. It was so good just to be happy, ad let Bernie do the thinking, right or wrong.

They reached the "Golden East Restaurant and Chop Suey Parlor, and when they were inside the door of the entry, at the foot of a marble staircase, Bernie suddenly took her in his arms and kissed her.

Then they ran up the stairs, blushing and self-consciously happy, and found themselves in an oriental atmosphere such as Annie's narrow experience had never compassed. There were embroidered panels on the walls depicting Chinese scenes, and here and there a picture of a man in a gilded wood in intricate designs of men and monsters.

Lanterns depended from the painted ceiling, and with silken tassels and pendants that tinkled in the breeze. They sat at a small teakwood table in a corner. There was a marble set in the top of it, its rim and legs were wondrously ornate. Bernie gave an order to the smiling slant-eyed yellow man who seemed in some inscrutable fashion to serve them.

Bernie suddenly laid his hand over Annie's as it lay on the glistening table and whispered:

"Well, I guess it's all right with us, ain't it?"

Annie could find no words. She closed her eyes an instant, smiled and gave her hand a little squeeze.

As long as she lived, she never forgot the thrill of that moment in that strange oriental setting which seemed so marvelously beautiful to her. She never afterward saw a window of a Chinese merchandise.

Glimpsed the tiny cupbottle where Gipsy Hop old his laundering without recalling that evening, that meal, the tiny green bowls of tea, and the touch of Bernie's hand as he uttered his commonplace words.

WHITE IS REIGNING SHADE THIS SUMMER

By ELOISE.

This is a white season if ever there was one. It started in the winter at the southern beaches where everybody wore white. White coats, white suits, white frocks, white shoes and hose, white hats of all kinds and white skirts were seen everywhere. And the woman who wanted to be in style this summer read the meaning of the white winter in the southlands and prepared her wardrobe accordingly. She invested heavily in white goods of all kinds with which to array herself in the hot weather, organza, voile, georgette for dressy wear and novelty weaves in silk and cotton for sports wear.

Here is a dainty model for afternoon wear made of snow white georgette with a plain tight undershirt and a long, full tunic piece. The blouse, sleeves and tunic are trimmed with many small buttons and rows of hand embroidery. A bit of white silk finishes the round neck. Although a very youthful model, it will be equally becoming because of its simplicity to the older matrons.

The room was awfully large, the children thought. The costly paintings and elegant furniture made it a wonderful room. But even after seeing this room the children were starting when the king led them into the ballroom, where the king and queen entertained their people at affairs of state. This room was three or four times as big as the children's home at home, they thought, and was lined with mirrors. The ceilings were covered with murals and the paintings and the tapestries and the children knew must have cost thousands of dollars. You will have to get mother to tell you what kind of cloth tapestry is.

The floor was inlaid with what seemed like a hundred pictures of castles and towers in fancy patterns, and was highly polished. Large rugs were scattered about the floor. Every one of the rugs, Jane thought, would more than fill an ordinary room.

The children would have been awed by the size and significance of the castle had not the king and queen made them feel at home immediately. The little folks and their friends were shown to the rooms they would occupy in the castle, and these, too, were magnificent.

Each one of the little folks had a big room. The walls in Jane's room were papered with brocade blue satin—the windows were hung with satin of the same shade. The bed had a canopy over it, just like Jane had seen in pictures of castles and the furniture was all white with blue carpeting scattered over it. The carpet was of blue velvet. A door led into a white marble bathroom, with all kinds of tubs. There was a big bathtub, big enough for Jane to get lost in; then there was a smaller tub, and a shower bath, and a foot tub, and so many other things Jane couldn't tell you about them. There was a big clothes closet, too, and then another door which led into Jennie's room, which was just like Jane's except that it was all pink instead of blue.

The girls were both speechless with joy. Jennie especially had never dreamed of such splendor.

Jack's room was fixed up to suit a boy. The walls were painted with all sorts of out-of-door scenes. The designs on the door and window hangings told stories of adventure and daring. From the windows he could look over the wildest part of the country surrounding the castle. There was a miniature pool in his bathroom where he could jump in and paddle around to his heart's content.

The rooms of Captain Brave and Ladydear were equally as wonderful. A royal breakfast awaited all as soon as they could get tidied up a bit. After breakfast the children were free to roam about the castle and the castle grounds and explore things to their hearts' content.

ROMANCES IN THE OLD BURYINGGROUND.

Last summer, in the course of my walks through the little village where I was stopping, I came one day to an old buryingground beside the white church at the crossroads.

And having an hour to spare I turned in at the narrow gate and spent it wandering about. A sad way to spend a summer afternoon you might think? Then I do not believe you ever tried it. To me there is nothing sad about an old buryingground. I love that world—all the difference between the quiet life span of half a dozen infants who died in infancy (beginning with Martha, born June 3, 1842, died June 5), and also the names and dates of four other children of Samuel, and Mary, beloved wife of Samuel, and Mary, beloved wife of Samuel, and Mary, beloved wife of Samuel.

Just beyond are two stones which suggest a different picture. There is the stone of John, born 1838, and very old beside is the stone of Lucy, born 1803, died December 18, 1888. Just 14 days later. In death they were not divided. Can you not picture a country mother and Joan?

Most common and among the most pathetic of all the inscriptions is that which recorded the death of a young wife with the significant addition of "Also an infant." Let us give up other things besides aeroplanes and submarines, and what when in the year 1890, some other dreamer wanders among old gravesones he shall not so often read this particular story.

THE WISHING PLANE

BY WILLIS WINTER

The doors of the castle were opened by two tall men dressed in velvet suits with fancy trimmings.

They entered a large hall, with a high ceiling from which hung giant chandeliers. The ceilings and walls were covered with paintings. On one side of the hall was a wide marble stairway which led to the upper floor, and a huge arch on the other side led to the main reception room of the castle.

The room was awfully large, the children thought. The costly paintings and elegant furniture made it a wonderful room. But even after seeing this room the children were starting when the king led them into the ballroom, where the king and queen entertained their people at affairs of state. This room was three or four times as big as the children's home at home, they thought, and was lined with mirrors. The ceilings were covered with murals and the paintings and the tapestries and the children knew must have cost thousands of dollars. You will have to get mother to tell you what kind of cloth tapestry is.

The floor was inlaid with what seemed like a hundred pictures of castles and towers in fancy patterns, and was highly polished. Large rugs were scattered about the floor. Every one of the rugs, Jane thought, would more than fill an ordinary room.

The children would have been awed by the size and significance of the castle had not the king and queen made them feel at home immediately. The little folks and their friends were shown to the rooms they would occupy in the castle, and these, too, were magnificent.

Each one of the little folks had a big room. The walls in Jane's room were papered with brocade blue satin—the windows were hung with satin of the same shade. The bed had a canopy over it, just like Jane had seen in pictures of castles and the furniture was all white with blue carpeting scattered over it. The carpet was of blue velvet. A door led into a white marble bathroom, with all kinds of tubs. There was a big bathtub, big enough for Jane to get lost in; then there was a smaller tub, and a shower bath, and a foot tub, and so many other things Jane couldn't tell you about them. There was a big clothes closet, too, and then another door which led into Jennie's room, which was just like Jane's except that it was all pink instead of blue.

The girls were both speechless with joy. Jennie especially had never dreamed of such splendor.

Jack's room was fixed up to suit a boy. The walls were painted with all sorts of out-of-door scenes. The designs on the door and window hangings told stories of adventure and daring. From the windows he could look over the wildest part of the country surrounding the castle. There was a miniature pool in his bathroom where he could jump in and paddle around to his heart's content.

The rooms of Captain Brave and Ladydear were equally as wonderful. A royal breakfast awaited all as soon as they could get tidied up a bit. After breakfast the children were free to roam about the castle and the castle grounds and explore things to their hearts' content.

Children Romp and Play On Play Grounds at Schools

(By MRS. ABBIE HELMS.)

The Gang's All Here and their sisters, brothers and the other fellows" when you get within a block of the playgrounds, and what a cheering throng they are. There are a good many of them, and they are playing happily together. Sometimes, especially in the evenings when the employed boys are free to get up to a game of ball, the number runs up to 25.

Do they scrap when this large number gets together in the limited area of the playground? Not a bit of it; they are having such a passing good time they have no wish for a "mix up." In little groups they are playing volleyball and baseball for the larger boys, tennis for the boys and girls together, and there are swinging, jumping, and other kinds of games. The little fellows keep the little boys busy. There are teams for boys under 12 years of age with athletic stunts of all kinds to put across. The older boys, the "regular fellows," who have jobs and work every day and only indulge in games to keep themselves fit.

There are singing games for little people with folk dancing occasionally, and sand piles for the little tots of two years and older. It is such a fascinating place for the little fellows, and the little mother is busy keeping them happy and good time also. There are four swings, four teeter boards, two winged horses, and other equipment, at each playground.

The Webster playground is the smallest and by far the most used, as it is situated in a central location, and is surrounded by so many children that it is the busiest. It is taken over at 11 o'clock in the morning, and is crowded. The boys have to organize their games of ball in the adjoining streets, because there is no room elsewhere.

The supervisor of the Webster playground is Miss Eva Turner, whose home is in Arizona, and perhaps her experiences in the field make her a good one. She is a woman of judgment, and she can restrain and direct the activities of 50 healthy youngsters, crowded into a ridiculously small school yard. The other supervisors are Misses Mary Swan, Katherine Foster and Amanda Haver.

Four Playgrounds in City.

There are four playgrounds in the city, located at the Washington, Jefferson, Webster, and Adams schools. They are open every day, forenoon, afternoon and evening, for a period of two months. The director of playgrounds, G. Heineman, is a busy man, for besides his corps of supervisors, one for each playground, he is in charge of the entire system. He looks after the east beach, and his assistant, Jack Thompson, is in charge of the west side beach. The care of the beaches is a real problem, and should be taken over specifically by the city. But in sheer defense of the school children, who would persist in going to the beaches in crowds, the school board took charge of the same.

The creation of the dressing rooms was a composite affair also; the city furnishing the lumber, and the teacher of the manual training classes, his boys, and some of the girls, and the school buildings, doing the work. Before this was undertaken some transitory tents formed the only shelter.

It was in the summer of 1912 that the matter of having playgrounds was discussed in the meetings of the school board, and a resolution was passed asking the city council to make an appropriation for that purpose. But it was not until October, 1913, that the sum of $300 was appropriated for the establishment and maintenance of these grounds. It was found that the sum given by the city was inadequate for the purpose, and so a committee was taken up by public-spirited citizens to help buy the equipment.

Churches Raise Funds.

The question of having playgrounds for the children of the city was taken up and discussed in the meetings of the churches, and it was decided that they were worse than useless unless they had a proper staff and supervision. So a committee headed by S. Lovjoy and J. A. Worland was appointed to raise money. They obtained pledges from private subscription to the amount of $555. The board of education increased the sum by $153.50, making a total of $708.50. This was invested in equipment. This was in June, 1913, and the equipment was purchased, installed and the grounds opened that summer. That fall, in October, 1913, the American Federation of Labor raised $1,000, and the city board of education raised $1,000, making a total of $2,708.50. This was used to pay the supervisors, and the educational system of the city schools.

large and expand that work as a part of their education and what they learn will never enter into the minds of the children of the future. They are good citizens and good workers if they have the chance.

Missionaries have found that work among the children of any race is many folds more successful than among adults. That is why the Episcopal church has centered its work among the American Indians upon the children and why it hopes to do recently released by the American W. C. A. in the heart of Paris. With the restaurant, the building will combine living quarters, a movie machine and exhibition room.

It is a direct outgrowth of one of the first clubs which the W. C. A. opened in Paris in the early days of the French working women. The club, known as the "Fleur de Lys" club, had a membership of 1,500, and was

A slight little woman with a firm mouth, trusting voice and quick dark eyes—the impression one gets when looking at Miss Margaret Bondfield who is in this country as a delegate of the British Federation of Labor, and the American Federation of Labor convention recently closed.

She is a slight little woman, but she is bringing a huge message to the women of America. And coming from a woman in her capacity, the message means something. Miss Bondfield has worked since she was 13 years old and holds a union card which represents 25 years of active service in the labor movement. There is no labor movement with which she has not been in touch. She is assistant secretary of the National Federation of Women Workers which represents 65,000 women and she is a member of the parliamentary committee of the Trade Union Congress which represents four and a half million workers both men and women.

Here is her message in part: "There is no question affecting society which is not a woman's question. Now that women are citizens throughout the world they will be responsible with men for all mistakes of government and administration. I have been told since my arrival in this country that your politics is a dirty game. If that is so then it is a game for the women to clean it up by insisting that principles and personal character shall be the first qualification for candidates. Differences of opinion, however, will always exist. But a dull world it would be without them, but even honest opponents can join hands in getting rid of the trail of money power when it is used to degrade public life. Women also should have interest in securing educational systems free from all influences of tyranny and militarism, and women who have struggled with press and association."

And as a last word to the American women she said, "Do not be afraid of new ideas."

Her message for social unrest is peaceful negotiation through collective bargaining. In speaking of the peace treaty she said that the peace treaty signed was a serious surprise and shock to the workers of England. They are relieved that the present war is over, but see in the peace of

"Christmas day some of the convalescent boys went out and gathered up a lot of boxes from home and the only Christmas we had was that given to us by the Red Cross."

The boys are glad to dance. We had lots of dances, always on rough boards, and generally the only music was a squeaky victrola or an old fiddle. There wasn't any class distinction. Everyone danced with everyone. The biggest of the Americans in France will be missed by all of us. No Americans were strangers. "Lo, what state you from?" and we were acquainted.

"In February our unit broke up, and the rest of the time until I sailed I was with the army of occupation, going all over France. I got down to Nice, but it was against regulations, so we didn't get far into Italy. The little French that I learned here was practically of no value. Americans are a lot of fun, but I don't think I learned over again when we got to France."

Miss Gibbs has some pictures taken while she was on leave—many views of ruined Rheims, the Hotel de Ville, the palace of Versailles, the Marne, Belleau Woods, Monte Carlo, and many of the places now historical. The trip home was made on the ship, the "Kaiserin," 100 nurses and 100 soldiers being aboard. The return trip was very different from the trip across, she says. The ship was flooded with lights. There was dancing and good times day and night.

When the "Kaiserin" was reached everyone went wild. There was frantic yelling until all were hoarse. Miss Gibbs said that nothing ever equalled her feeling when she saw the Statue of Liberty. The ship was welcomed almost personified. Then came the welcome ship carrying New York's most representative citizens and band. Everyone broke down and sobbed like babies. But confident of the power of music, the band struck up "Nobody Knows How Dry I am." It worked. They were again laughing, gurgling, giggling bunch of passengers.

A wonderful experience—paid for by months of faithful service.

Sheboygan—Milwaukee was selected as the next convention city of the Wisconsin Association of Masseurs and Masseuses at the annual convention of that body in this city. Dr. E. P. Jordan, Milwaukee, was elected president, and Dr. Thomas Adams, Sheboygan, vice-president.

VENEREAL DISEASE RULES ADOPTED

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Janesville, July 4.—A full set of rules for the control of venereal diseases was adopted by the state board of health in its semi-annual session this week. These have the full effect of law. Adoption of a code of rules governing the conduct of public health institutions as provided by a new law, was left to a later meeting.
The state health officer, C. A. Harper, was appointed to represent the board, until further action is taken, and as a member of the committee of examiners for the examination and certification to the county boards of public health nurses, or public health inspectors, under the so-called county nurse law.
The appointment of Allan S. Watson to be director of the state, of cooperative laboratory, or director of the co-operative laboratory at Oshkosh, and of Miss Martha Riley to be director of social service work, of the bureau of venereal disease control, was also announced.
E. J. Tully, now chemist and field sanitary engineer for the board, was transferred to the new bureau of sanitary engineering in the state board of health, created to deal with problems of pure water supply, sewage disposal, etc. A chief engineer for this bureau will be appointed later.
A report was made yesterday that all legislation asked by the board was enacted with the exception of one bill—that proposing to exempt health officers from personal liability for acts performed in pursuance of their official duties.

Pretty Yvonne Weds Eight Members of 39th Division

New York.—Yvonne, a pretty brown-eyed siren of the Paris boulevards, languishes behind the bars of the jail in her native city and eight members of the thirty-ninth division, returning from France, are "grass widowers" and glad of it.
Yvonne reluctantly confessed to marriages with each of the eight members of the thirty-ninth division, and added "she was not the only French girl guilty of plural marriages with doughboys of that division."
The story of Yvonne's evident willingness to marry the entire division was brought back here recently by Private Elliott Brown of Atlanta, Ga., who served in France with the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth infantry of the thirty-ninth division.
Brown, who did not fall a victim to Yvonne's pretty brown eyes, was out walking in Paris with two members of his regiment when another soldier along with Yvonne introduced her to his wife.
The introduction proved a sad awakening for Brown's two companions, as each of them believed she was his "until death do us part."
Yvonne's English was decidedly limited, but the three "husbands" came to a quick understanding and the much-married Yvonne was conducted to a court where her French was understood, and where she finally admitted her eight weddings.
The allotment made by each of her husbands was cancelled.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, July 5, 1879.—Fred Quinn of Elgin celebrated at his Janesville home.

Hon. W. H. Washburn of Waukesha saw the Fourth in Janesville.

St. Patrick's Temperance society had a most successful festival and dance last evening. The receipts were over $300, there being present 215 couples, not counting those who had complimentary. It was one of the events of the Fourth.

The veterans' dance Thursday was rather a fizzle. Too hot, too much going on elsewhere and too few dancers. Their entertainment last night more than made up for it.

Addresses were given yesterday by Governor Smith, Hon. C. G. Williams, Hon. W. C. Whitford and Gen. E. E. Bryant.

It is estimated that there were 5,000 people at the picnic grounds yesterday. The Bower City band furnished music and a target shooting contest was held. There were games, athletic sports, plenty to eat and drink and general social doings to fill the time. Peace reigned with the exception of an occasional skirmish behind the beer stands.

This morning a special train bore the Governor and his party, together with the Guards, Veterans, and Bower City band to Freeport to attend the grand review and encampment. The procession was formed on East Milwaukee street. The train started at 10 o'clock.

Miss Estella Griswold left the city today to visit the Wisconsin dolls and other points of interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles De Berard of Norwood, Ill., spent the Fourth in this city, visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Powers and others.

Leather Company Organized.
Sheboygan.—The American Leather Specialty works has been organized here with a capital of $25,000. It manufactures gloves, mittens, and leather specialties.

PLYMOUTH

Mr. and Mrs. John Runnige entertained Mr. and Mrs. Rob Jackson and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Flint, Beloit, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Tewes and family, Abbie and John Swann were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Swain east of Beloit, Sunday.

It may be of interest to the many friends of Carl Borkenhagen who is a traveling musician with the George Hall Show Co., that he is now in Sask. Canada and states that the country through which he is traveling has not had a rain since the snow left. The thermometer hovers 90 degrees steadily, and the grass is burned to the ground which is baked so that large cracks can be seen.

Water he also states is at a premium at Kerrsberts, Sask., water was brought to town from a spring 17 miles away and sold at 5 cents per ten cents. Mr. Borkenhagen has been through Minn., North Dakota and says there is not any place but his good old bader state for him.

Miss Luella Borkenhagen was a first of the week visitor with Miss Vera Cox of Beloit.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Royce, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Royce and sons were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merton Peck five miles east of Beloit on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Borkenhagen entertained Mr. and Mrs. Gust Behlings and Mrs. Bertha Gundie, Hanover, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Arnold and son Glen, Beloit, Sunday.

Pieces of Eight

Being the authentic narrative of a treasure discovered in the Bahamas Islands in the Year 1693—now first given to the public.

By RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Samson went trotting along the twisting banks, we cautiously feeling our way after him, for something like a quarter of a mile; and then, coming round a sudden bend, the creek opened out into a sort of basin. On the left bank stood two large palmetto shrubs. Samson indicated that there was our anchorage; and then, as we were almost alongside of them, the cheery halloo of a well-known voice hailed us. It was the "king," and as I answered his welcome the morning suddenly sang for me—for there, too, was Calypso at his side.

The water ran so deep at the creek's side that we were able to moor the Flamingo right up against the bank, and when I had jumped ashore and greeted my friends, and the "king" had executed a brief characteristic fantasia on the manifest advantages of having a hidden pirate's creek in the family, he unfolded his plans, or rather that portion of them that was necessary at the moment.

CHAPTER VI.

An Old Enemy.

Charlie Webster's laconic note was naturally our chief topic over breakfast. "Tobias escaped—just heard he is on your island. Watch out. Will follow in a day or two." The "king" read it out, when I handed him this note across the table.

"Your friend writes like a true man of action," he added, "like Caesar—and also the electric telegraph. We must send word to Sweeney to be on the lookout for him. I will send Samson the Redoubtable with a message to him this morning. Meanwhile we will smoke and think."

Then for the next hour the "king" thought aloud; while Calypso and I sat and listened, occasionally throwing in a parenthesis of comment or suggestion. It was evident, we all agreed, that Calypso had been right. It had been Tobias and none other whose evil eye had sent her so breathless back to me, waiting in the shadow of the woods; and it was the same evil eye that had fallen vulture-like on her golden doubloon exposed on Sweeney's counter.

It was clear that there were such coins on the island in somebody's possession. Then, when he had watched Calypso on her way home—and without any doubt, been the spectator of our meeting at the edge of the wood though we had been unable to catch sight of him—there would of course be a suspicion in his mind that my quest might at least be approaching success, and that his ancestral millions might be almost in my hands. That there might be some other treasure on the island with which neither he nor his grandfather had any concern would not occur to him, nor would it be likely to trouble him if it did. My presence was enough to prove that the treasure was his—for was it not his treasure that I was after? Logic irrefutable! How was he to know that all the treasure so far discovered was that modest hoard—unearthed, as I heard, in the garden—the present whereabouts of which was known only to Calypso. The "king" had interrupted himself at this point of argument.

"By the way, Calypso, where is it?" he asked unexpectedly, to the sudden confusion of both of us. "Isn't it time you revealed your mysterious Aladdin's cave?"

"At the word 'cave' the submerged rose in Calypso's cheeks almost came to the surface of their beautiful olive. 'Cave!' she countered manfully, 'who said it was a cave?'

"It was merely a figure of speech, which—if I may say so, my dear—might apply with equal fitness, say—to a silk stocking."

And Calypso laughed through another tide of rose-color.

"No, dad, not that, either. Never mind where it is. It is perfectly safe, I assure you."

"But are you sure, my dear? Wouldn't it be safer, after all, here in the house? How can you be certain that no one but yourself will accidentally discover it?"

"I am absolutely certain that no one will," she answered, with an emphasis on the last three words which sent a thrill through me, for I knew that it was meant for me. "Of course, dad," she added, "if you insist—you shall have it. But seriously I think it is safer where it is, and if I were to fetch it, how can I be sure that no one"—she paused, with a meaning which I, of course, understood—"Tobias, for instance, would see me going—and follow me."

"To be sure—to be sure," said the "king." "What do you think, Friend Ulysses?"

"I think it more than likely that she might be followed," I answered, "and I quite agree with Miss Calypso. I certainly wouldn't advise her to visit her treasure just now—with the woods probably full of eyes. In fact," I added, smiling frankly at her, "I could scarcely answer for myself even—for I confess that she has filled me with an overpowering curiosity."

"So be it then," said the "king," "and now to consider what our friend here graphically speaks of as those eyes in the woods."

The "king" then made a determined descent into the practical. The woods, most probably, were full of eyes. In plain prose, we were almost certainly being watched. Unless—unless, indeed, my bogus departure for Nassau had fooled Tobias as we had hoped. But, even so, with that lure of Calypso's doubtless ever before him, it was too probable that he would not leave the neighborhood without some further investigation—"an investigation," the "king" explained, "which might well take the form of a midnight raid; murdered in our beds, and so forth."

That being so, being in fact almost a certainty—the "king" spoke as though he would be a much disappointed man otherwise—we must look to our garrison. After all, besides ourselves, we had but Samson and Erebus and their dark brethren of doubtful courage, while Tobias probably had command of a round dozen of doughty desperadoes. On the whole, perhaps, it might be best to avail ourselves of the crew of the Flamingo—"under cover of the dark," he repeated with a smile.

While he had been talking Samson had long since been on his way with the vessel, and as he had been admonished to hurry back it was scarcely noon when he returned, bringing in exchange a verbal message from Sweeney.

"The pockmarked party," ran the message as delivered by Samson, "had left the harbor in his sloop that morning. Yes, sir!"

"Ha! ha!" laughed he "king," turning to me. "So two can play at that game, says Henry P. Tobias, Jr. But if we haven't fooled him let's make sure that he hasn't fooled us. We'll bring up your crew all the same—what do you think?"

"Under cover of the dark," I assented.

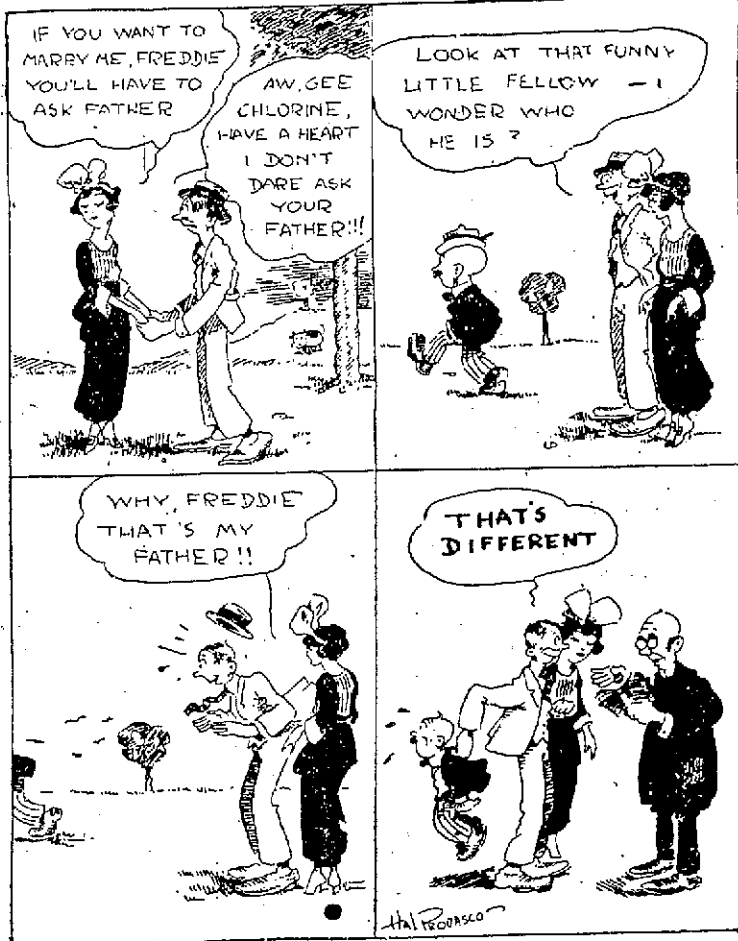

The "king's" instructions to me were that I was not to show my nose outside the house. I must regard myself as a prisoner with the entire freedom of his study—a large, airy room, on the second floor, well furnished with all manner of books, old prints, strange fishes in glass cases, rods, guns, pipe racks, curiosities of every kind from various parts of the world.

And then I came upon a photograph hanging over the writing desk—a tall, Spanish-looking young woman of remarkable beauty. It needed but one glance to realize that here was Calypso's mother, and as was natural I stood a long time scanning the countenance that was so like the face which, from my first sight of it, had seemed the loveliest in the world. This was a flower that had been the mother in its beauty, a little less touched with race than the one I loved, but the same fearless natural nobility was in it, and the figure had the same wild grace of pose, the same lithe strength of carriage.

Two or three days went by, but as yet there was no news of either Charlie Webster or Tobias. Nothing further had been heard of the latter in the settlement, and a careful patrolling of the neighborhood revealed no signs of him. Either his sailing away was a bona fide performance or he was lying low in some other part of the island—which of course would not be a difficult thing for him to do, as most of it was wilderness—and as, also, there were one or two coves on the deserted northern side where he could easily bide his time. Between that coast and us, however, lay some ten miles of scrub and mangrove swamps, and it was manifestly out of the question to patrol them too. There was nothing to do but watch and wait.

THAT'S DIFFERENT

At last there came a message from Charlie Webster, another of his Caesarian notes: "Sorry delays few days longer. Any news?"

That seemed to decide the "king." "What do you begin digging tomorrow? There are ten of us—with as many guns, four revolvers and plenty of machetes—not counting Calypso, who is an excellent shot herself."

I agreed that nothing would please me better—so an early-hour the following morning found us with the whole garrison—excepting Samson, whom it had been thought wise to leave at home as a bodyguard for Calypso—lined up at the old ruined mansion with picks and shovels and machetes, ready to commence operations.

We had worked for a week before we made a clearance of the ground floor. Then at last we came upon a solidly built stone staircase, winding downward. After clearing away the debris with which it was choked to a depth of some twenty or thirty steps, we came to a stout wooden door studded with nails.

"The dungeon at last," said the "king."

"The kitchens, I bet," said I.

Famous Skier Dies.

Edu Knute—Knute Helland, popular figure for the last decade or more at all the ski tournaments in the National Ski circuit, always in the company with his just as famous brother, Gunnar Helland, died at Chippewa Falls, which city he has made his home for years, at the age of 38, following an operation. Knute and Gunnar Helland were among the noted violin makers of the country, having learned the craft at Telemarken, Norway, where they also learned to ski. Knute was the last of the famous "old guard" skiers (first Norwegian skiers in America) to stay in the game. He made his last appearance on the ski slides of the northwestern in 1917-1918.

Dinner Stories

The son of the family was home on his first vacation since he had attained to the dignity of college prefect. He and his father were discussing affairs of the day, and finally the boy remarked:

"Say, gov, I hope when I am as old as you are I'll know more than you."

"I'll go you one better, my boy," the father replied, "I hope that when you are that old you will know as much as you think you do now."

A story told by Bishop Groer illustrates the plain nature of the man. On an occasion when he was to confirm a class, a carriage was sent for him in charge of an English coachman who had been imported by a wealthy American. Bishop Groer walked unaccompanied and in non-elegant dress from his front door to the carriage and entered it—but the driver did not move his horses. After waiting for a movement the bishop asked the man why he did not drive on.

"I'm waiting for the lord bishop of New York, sir," the proper person replied.

"Well," said the bishop, "I'm it. Drive on."

A youngster who heard an older sister say she would like to "shake" a boy who was rather attentive decided that he had solved the problem for her. He has a little girl playmate, when she tires of him, runs home.

After receiving such treatment the other day, he entered the house and said: "Mother, I know how sister can shake John. Mary knows how to do it and she'll tell her."

"How does Mary do it?" mother asked.

"Oh, she just runs away. That's how you can shake anybody."

"Save your old clothes!"

By Richard Spillane

NEW YORK. —Do not throw away your old clothes. In all probability all kinds of woolen and cotton goods will be more costly next fall and winter than at any time in 50 years.

If you are prudent you will be as saving of everything from your best suit to the bedclothes as you were in the days when the government was telling you it was a patriotic act to curtail your purchases to bare necessities.

There are men in the trade who declare ready-made men's suits that now sell for $35 will command $75 within a year. That seems extreme, but it is not impossible. There is a pronounced shortage of wool, threatening America. There is likelihood also of a pronounced shortage of cotton.

Read the REPRODUCTION from Mr. Spillane's article in The Cleveland Press of June 21.

What with STRIKES, SHORTER HOURS, scant WOOL production, a short COTTON crop, and other things, there's every prospect of continued HIGH PRICES in woollens and cottons—so

CHERISH YOUR OLD SUITS and OVERCOATS, you men—and Send 'em to be CLEANED!

Likewise, you MOTHERS and WIVES! Do not be too ready to throw away slightly worn GOWNS and DRESSES and CHILDREN'S garments! Make them do as long as they WILL through the able assistance of our skilled WORKERS!

We CLEAN, MEND, DYE and PRESS old garments! In our line we work WONDERS! Call the auto.

Mr. Citizen NOW'S the time for You to BUILD

HAVE you any conception of the demand for a place to live in this town? Have you watched rents increase, property values jump and throngs of people searching for a place to live? The housing situation in this city is strained to the breaking—there aren't places enough to go around.

We're Two Years Behind in Building

Government restrictions and orders, need of money for Liberty Loans, shortage of materials and labor—everything conspired to throw us back. We need houses, apartments, store and office buildings. It's a business opportunity.

Prices Are Not Going to Drop

Those who are in close touch with markets say that prices cannot drop to former levels—labor costs must remain high, demand for foodstuffs and building materials will force the fundamental law of supply and demand to work. In fact, they point out, building costs have not kept pace with increasing prices of foodstuffs and labor. We can build now for less relatively than at any time in years.

THIS building shortage coincides with the most critical industrial condition this country has ever had to face. We're making the transition from peace to war. Living costs are high. Unemployment for a large number of men means disaster. Without orders factories find it difficult to change from war orders to peace conditions. We must avoid industrial stagnation.

The Government Urges Us to Build Now

Realizing the need for immediate action, the U. S. Department of Labor has organized a movement to stimulate home building. Your $10,000 contract, they point out, forces ten for $1,000—those ten call for 100 sub-contracts for $100. If 50,000 others follow your lead it will reach clear back into the fabric of our nation and help stabilize business.

Forward--American Business

Let's get our big-minded, broad visioned bankers, our property owners and our contractors together and start to BUILD NOW. It's a business chance, an opportunity to build up local prosperity and help get our country back on a Prosperity Basis. Start the ball rolling today with your contract!

Speed Officer Arrested.

Kenosha—William J. Frazier, deputy sheriff assigned to catching automobile speeders, knows how unpleasant it feels to be held up by a speed officer, the number of your car taken, and when you plead about how slow you were going to be told to tell it to the judge. He went to Chicago with Charles Otto, another deputy sheriff, to get some motorcycles for their work. On Michigan avenue they were arrested by speed officers. By dint of much pleading they finally obtained professional company and were let off without a fine.

Paris, July 5.—Turkish troops have entered Aidin, which the Greeks have evacuated, taking with them the civilian population, according to a Constantinople dispatch to the Temps.

Home Has a New Meaning Since

The winning of the World War has brought home to Americans the lesson that homes must be protected at any cost when threatened by foreign invasion.

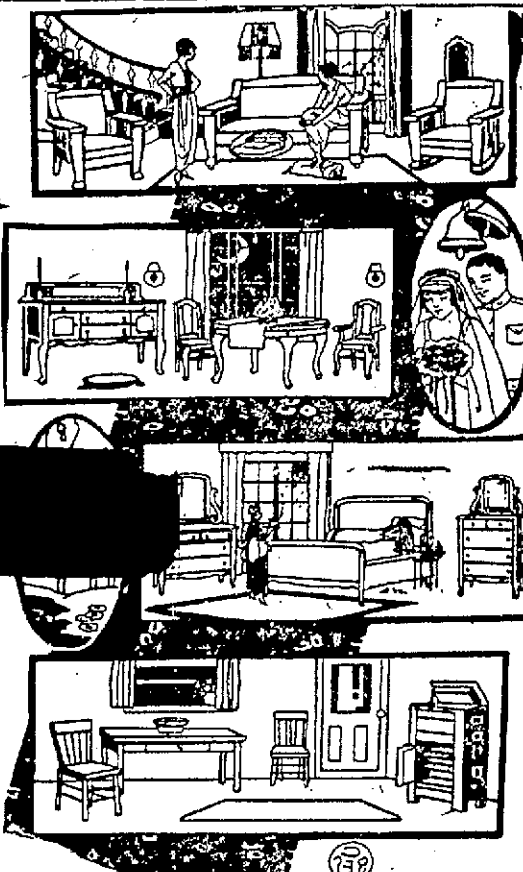

And Now

Home lovers appreciate more than ever that the women folks, who make home what it is, are entitled to conveniences which make the house work easy and bring comfort to the whole family. We are showing a new, efficient line of Gas Ranges, Gas Water Heaters and other Gas Appliances. Call, Write or Phone.
